City may pay $95,000 for 134 acres in canyon

By Ace Ramel
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The Missoula City Council may soon decide whether to buy 134 acres of land in Hellgate Canyon for the proposed river corridor park system.

The city received an option Monday from the bankrupt Milwaukee Road to buy the land for $95,000. The old railroad right of way runs through Hellgate Canyon on the south bank of the Clark Fork River.

Mayor Bill Cregg signed the option giving the city buying rights to the land for 90 days, Cregg said at a press conference at the University of Montana's journalism school. But according to Cregg's administrative assistant, Dave Wilcox, the authority of the mayor to sign the option without City Council approval was in question, so the proposal will be presented to the council tomorrow during a committee meeting. The council will probably officially address the issue during next Monday's regular meeting.

If the council approves the proposal, Cregg will "probably go ahead and sign the option," Wilcox said.

Even though more than $200,000 in the city's conservation fund is available to buy the land, the city is looking for outside help to defray the cost. Cregg said the city is negotiating with Trout Unlimited to buy and donate the land.

Cregg said if the group bought the land and gave the city access rights, it would have a vested interest in trying to prevent fish-killing drawdown and dredging of the Milltown dam reservoir, which is upstream from the

Fate of Bob resolution to be decided by judge

By Jim Marks
Kaimin Reporter

Federal District Court Judge W. J. Jameson made no decision yesterday on whether the Bob Marshall Resolution is constitutional.

The Bob Marshall Resolution was invoked last May by a House committee to stop oil and gas exploration and leasing in the Bob Marshall, Great Bear and Lincoln Scapegoat Wilderness areas for three years. Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont., sponsored the committee action.

The parties involved in the suit against the resolution completed their arguments at the hearing in Billings. All that remains now is for Jameson to make a decision.

Hank Fischer, a member of the Bob Marshall Alliance, one of the groups involved in the suit, was at the hearings and was interviewed by telephone last night. He said Jameson's decision may take up to four weeks.

Mountain States Legal Foundation and Pacific Legal Foundation — two law firms representing industry — sued the Department of the Interior last spring on the basis that the committee action upset the separation of power doctrine. They said action should have come from the executive branch of the government and not the legislative branch.

The Bob Marshall Alliance and the Wilderness Society requested and received the right to intervene on behalf of the Department of the Interior from a federal court. As such, these two environmental groups are the defendants in the suit.

The Bob Marshall Alliance and the Wilderness Society argued that the committee action was constitutional because a statute in the Federal Land Management Act empowered the committee to take action.

Fischer said that the hearing has not changed anything concerning the resolution so far.

"It's certainly up in the air as to what the judge's decision might be," he added.

Brown calls Spaulding trip 'last straw,' quits committees

By Karen McGrath
Kaimin Reporter

Bob Brown, a third-year law student at the University of Montana, resigned from several ASUM committees Monday night, saying that he is discouraged with the direction ASUM has taken recently and wants no further association with it.

Brown resigned his committee posts before the Student Union Board (SUB), which met Monday night. He was a member of the Health Service Committee and the Blue Cross Committee, in addition to SUB. He was also the ASUM bargaining representative working with the University Teachers' Union.

Brown told SUB that he was disappointed in Central Board and, in particular, in ASUM President Steve Spaulding.

Amid controversy, Spaulding took a trip to Ogden, Utah, Sunday to attend the Big Sky Conference, in which several Big Sky Conference student government officials met. The trip cost the ASUM administrative fund $425.

Spaulding called a special CB meeting last Tuesday to get approval for the trip because a motion passed by CB last May took away all out-of-state travel funds for ASUM groups.

CB voted 10-7 to send Spaulding to Utah, but some CB members and observers, including Brown, were not in favor of overturning the motion made last May.

The Utah trip was "the last straw," Brown said. "I don't approve of CB sanctioning Spaulding to go there (to Utah), and I approve less of the methods Spaulding used to get there."

Brown added that there was not sufficient notification to students that a special meeting would be held. "If I would have been there, I would have had a few things to say," Brown said.

Spaulding could not be reached for comment late last night as he had not yet returned from the trip to Utah.

ASUM Vice President Eric Johnson said that Brown has been effective in doing work for ASUM.

"He's done a service to the university community," Johnson said. "I wish that more students were as astute at committee responsibilities as Bob has been in the past."

CB member Marquette McRae-Zook said, that Brown is one of the best resources that ASUM had. "Maybe Central Board should stop and think what we're doing and put more thought into what we're doing rather than acting hastily," she said.

While CB member Tom Hartman said that Brown did a good job on SUB, he added, "It seems there is a tendency for people to resign quickly when they find something they don't like something about student government. His resigning wasn't the best thing to do for student government."

Brown did not resign his seats on the Employment Discrimination and K. Ross Toole committees.

"I have too much involved with these committees and just too much interest in them to resign," Brown said.

Brown is chairman of the K. Ross Toole Committee, which is looking into the possibility of providing a faculty position in Toole's name that would be filled by a visiting professor.

International group tries to aid political prisoners

By Melinda Sinistro
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The role of Amnesty International groups is to educate the public on human rights violations throughout the world, Craig Rock, U.S. campus network coordinator for the group, said last night.

Rock presented a film, Prisoners of Conscience, that dealt with two cases of human rights violations investigated by Amnesty International, a group that opposes the death penalty and seeks the liberation of non-violent political prisoners.

The film documented the cases of Danylo Shumuk, a Russian who has been in prison for 35 years for what the Soviet government called "spreading anti-Soviet propaganda," and Gustavo Westercamp, 26-year-old Argentine law student arrested in May of 1978 on similar charges, and who has served five years in prison in that country.

Rock led a discussion following the film in which he explained the basic objectives of Amnesty International. He said the purpose of the group is to "liberate men and women and children detained anywhere because of their beliefs, color, sex, ethnic origin, language, or religion provided they have not used or advocated violence, to obtain fair and prompt trials for all political prisoners and to abolish torture

and the death penalty."

Rock said the methods by which the group accomplishes this include adoption groups, an Urgent Action Network and a Campus Network.

Adoption groups are local organizations of 10 to 25 people who are assigned individual prisoners whose cases have been investigated by Amnesty International. The adoption groups launch massive letter campaigns to governments responsible for human rights violations. Rock said this "lets the governments know that we know what they're doing" and results in better treatment of prisoners because "the actions of the offending government are being recognized."

The Urgent Action Network is a worldwide network of Amnesty International members responsible for sending telegrams to assist people "in extreme danger," such as those facing execution.

Among the group's latest projects is a campaign to publicize the disappearances of thousands of people in at least twenty countries whose political beliefs

Corporate stones build blockades

Citizens of the United States no longer have a voice in one aspect of their government. That is, they don't if they disagree with James Watt, unfortunately our Secretary of Interior.

Watt yesterday told his underlings, both political appointees and employees of the Interior Department, that he would prefer that they put themselves "off limits" to paid leaders of national environmental groups. Watt's rationale for this action is that the national employees of environmental groups "distorted" his views and "were only interested in using the meetings for their own political purposes."

Where does one begin rebutting such perverted logic? Not only has Watt taken extreme anti-environmental stands in the past and expressed his intention to act upon these stands in the future, but he now refuses to consider other sides of the issues.

As head of the Interior department, Watt is in effect conveying that the views of an entire portion of the American public are not valid — that they are not even worth listening to. And Watt is saying that not only is he refusing to listen to these people, he does not want other members of the government (of the people, by the people, for the people — remember that one?) to listen either.

Watt has not put similar restrictions on meetings with representatives of oil, mining and timber companies so will be making decisions reflecting only one viewpoint.

This is a narrow-minded, short-sighted, arrogant point of view on his part.

It would seem that Watt is perhaps afraid of discussing issues with the environmentalists. He'll find, through such discussion, that they are right and he is wrong, and that he has been making a spectacular ass of himself all along.

Watt is discarding the democratic process and setting himself up as a dictator on a throne built of corporate stone. But when that high seat crumbles from mismanagement and misuse, Watt won't find any support from American citizens, in whom he put no respect and no trust.

Another overlooked leader

Editor: Enough has not yet been said about Jeannette Rankin. Her devotion to pacifism and feminism must not be forgotten. I do not believe this University has given Miss Rankin the recognition she deserves. Students should be more aware of this significant individual who was a resident of Missoula and a graduate of this University.

Daily the people of Missoula parade past a park named in her honor at one end of the Madison Street bridge. But do these people know she was the first woman elected to the U.S. Congress? Do they realize what part she played in the woman's suffrage movement? Did they know she was the only Representative to vote against the declaration of war with Japan in 1941?

Nov. 17 in the Journalism Library, Kevin Giles shed more light in her direction during his talk about Jeannette and his book "Jeannette Rankin, Flight of the Dove." It was quite interesting and informative. I only wish more students had partaken in the opportunity to learn more about this incredibly political minded woman.

Miss Rankin, had she still been alive today would have been one of our great leaders in the disarmament and anti-nuclear war movements. In 1961 she was quoted as saying "My views on war have never changed. I have always been an advocate of peace. I am fearful that warfare especially in this nuclear era will be the downfall of mankind."

Jeannette Rankin's spirit is with us today especially among University of Montana's students. I hope that more people can become aware of this true Montana pioneer.

Another overlooked problem

Editor: For Randy Stevens, parking once came easily. During his first year at the University of Montana, he lived in Elrod Hall. Randy, like most on-campus students did not drive his car every day. The lot in front of the dorm provided easy accessibility and for only $12.00, he could park for free!

But this year has been different. Stevens has come back to Elrod Hall only to find out that more people are using the student lot this year than last. Since his usual parking lot is so often lacking an available space, he has been forced to go elsewhere. On occasion he has opted to park across the street from Elrod Hall in a tiny, unpaved section. But the lot is poorly lighted, so Stevens fears the threat of van-

by Garry Trudeau

dalism. He has also parked behind food service. But he has already been ticketed three times for parking beyond the allowed time period. Randy can barely stay afloat financially as it is; at three dollars a ticket, his miscellaneous expense money is spent.

He is in a quandary as to where he should park his car. Should he leave his car on a side street overnight? He could then park close to the dormitory but the chance of theft is increased dramatically. Or he could park on campus; but the next available space is several buildings away. The end result? An obvious problem.

Kim Porter is an off-campus student. All of her classes are in the afternoon hours. She too has a difficult time parking on campus and can not afford a registration fee. She is forced to park two blocks away from the university. No problem, right? Wrong. Kim leaves the campus at 6:30 three nights of the week. Along with the anxiety of getting home on time, she is forced to quicken her step for another reason. Kim has to walk those two blocks, generally by herself, in darkness. The fear of being raped is more than a valid concern. It's scary!

Hundreds are put in Randy and Kim's positions each year. Parking at the University of Montana is a problem. Recently, a group of concerned students, Students for Better Parking, polled hundreds of students. The results were shocking.

Eighty-six percent believe that a parking problem exists on our campus. That statistic is understandable. For the fall quarter of 1981, 4,299 A and B decals were sold. That may not seem like a big number when there are more than 8,000 students. But there are only 2,823 spaces available for student parking. That means that there are more than 1,300 decals then parking spots. It can be argued that not every registered vehicle will be on campus at once. So in theory the current parking availability could be feasible. But the system must be reevaluated when such a vast majority of students are unhappy with the service they have purchased.

And speaking of money, why is the amount of a fine for a parking violation so high? The university charges $3.00 while a city violation is only $1.00. Seventy-four percent of those polled expressed concern over such a high fee.

Finally, an amazing 96 percent of those polled have no idea where their registration and parking fine fees go.

Changes should be made. But changes can only come by a joint, cooperative student-administration effort. A start can best begin through the office of Ted Parker, UM Physical Plant Director. Please voice your concern in a form of an editorial. By working together, better parking can be accomplished.

A disarmament afterthought

Editor: The dilemma facing humanity today is far more complicated than "to disarm or not to disarm?" The question that must be addressed is equally simple and perplexing: What are the underlying causes that drive human beings to war?

The physicist, Freeman Dyson, contemplated this very question prior to WWII which he witnessed in his homeland of England. In his book, Disturbing the Universe, Dyson recalls that "The answer was amazingly simple. I called it Cosmic Unity. Cosmic Unity said: There is only one of us. We are all the same person. I am you and I am Winston Churchill and Hitler and Gandhi and everybody. There is no problem of injustice because your sufferings are also mine. There will be no problem of war as soon as you understand that in killing me you are only killing yourself."

As the people (government) of the United States build up nuclear defenses against the rest of the world (Russia?), so the rest of the world retaliates by building defenses against the U.S. We are not only preparing to kill our enemies (whoever "they" may be), we are preparing to kill ourselves, each other, and our children.

Nuclear war is indeed human suicide.

It's only rock 'n roll

Editor: Re: Dan Carter, sourpuss (Kaimin, Nov. 18).

Comparing Blackfoot to the Rolling Stones is not only nauseating, it borders on blasphemy. Not only that, but your hostile attitude towards Patti Bingham is completely ridiculous. Have you ever publicly shared an experience that meant so much to you? No one said you had to like it or care about it. No one even said you had to read it.

For every dozen boring milk-breath preppies who listen to Quaalude thud-rock like Blackfoot, there is only one person like Patti who can embody the true spirit of rock and roll music into her psyche, soul and lifestyle. I'm grateful that people like Patti still exist. Otherwise, I may quit rock 'n roll, and sell shoes at the Southgate Mall.

Forty lashes with an AC/DC lunchbox. It's not worth getting jacked over, it's only rock 'n roll.

A fine film

Editor: I wanted to comment on the fine film shown (Nov. 16) at the U of M Ballroom. The movie, "Assignment Life" addresses the abortion issue and provides some provocative answers to questions like "what about the unwanted child," or "what about a woman's right over her own body?"

With the proposed amendment to the constitution that would limit or eliminate abortions, I feel it is important that each of us know where we stand on this issue and why.

Thank you for printing this.

UTU wants higher body count

By Pam Newbern
Kaimin Reporter

The University of Montana Teachers' Union membership drive, which was scheduled to end on Monday, has been extended until the end of the quarter in an attempt to recruit more members.

"We got the drive started kind of slowly because of me," said Michael Kupilik, assistant professor of economics and head of the membership drive. "I'm kind of busy right now, and this takes a lot of extra time. You don't get paid for it."

Kupilik said 20 new faculty members had signed up for the union so far.

"The response to the drive has been positive," Kupilik said. "The union members think it's good because there are more people paying dues, which makes for a stronger union. The non-union members think the union did a good job last year when the union negotiated the new teaching contract which gave the faculty substantial pay increases over the year before."

According to Kupilik, more than one-half of UM faculty now belong to the union.

"We're hoping to get another 20 to 25 people to join in the next two weeks," Kupilik said. "A number of people are just waiting to be asked. We're just starting to cook now."

During the next two weeks, union members will be contacting non-union faculty personally and asking them to join the union, Kupilik said.

"We just got the lists made up of who is not in the union, and where they are," Kupilik said. "In the next two weeks, we'll be walking into their offices and asking them to join. We would like to sign everyone up, but we hope to get at least 20 more members. That would mean that about 65 percent of the faculty would be in the union."

Don't can it—recycle it!

By Ray Murray
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

If you're interested in recycling, ASUM's Recycling Committee wants your help.

According to Butch Turk, SAC's representative on the Recycling Committee, only six people are now participating in organizing the recycling of aluminum cans and computer paper on campus.

"There's enough work for 30 to 50 people to help in a real small way," Turk said. The reason more people aren't involved, Turk said, is because they don't know the program exists.

Last year ASUM signed a contract with Friends to Youth, a local counseling center to juvenile offenders, to recycle aluminum cans and computer paper.

Since that time, ASUM has collected $175 worth of cans and computer paper.

Sixty percent of the money goes to Friends to Youth, which uses the money to run its program. The remaining 40 percent goes to ASUM and is used for advertising the program.

Jeff Langan, director of Friends to Youth, said the program has been "nominally successful." Langan said most of cans and computer paper are collected from married student housing.

Langan said the reason married student housing is successful in recycling is because numerous bins are used for collection, whereas the campus has only two bins.

The bins on campus are located behind Turner Hall and the Lodge. Langan said Friends to Youth is trying to get a bin on the north side of the University Center.

Turk, a philosophy/economics major, said the Recycling Committee would like to make recycling as easy as possible for students. To do this, Turk said, he would like to have collection points in every building on campus.

By making students aware of the recycling program, Langan said, he would expect business to pick up "radically."

"Without question, the funds collected so far have been a drop in the bucket as to what could be recycled," he said.

Turk said if the recycling of cans and computer paper goes well, the committee would go on to recycle newspapers and bottles.

The committee's next meeting is Friday at 11 a.m. in the ASUM Conference Room.

If we let idiots like the Black Panthers survive under our form of government, maybe we'll have to change it.

MontPIRG fee may be waived

By Bill Miller
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

The Montana Public Interest Research Group (MontPIRG) has decided to abandon plans for a mandatory refundable fee system for a waivable fee system. This funding method will require approval by the Board of Regents at its regular meeting Dec. 11.

The decision was made Nov. 25 during a two hour meeting between University of Montana President Neil Bucklew and members of the MontPIRG steering committee. According to committee member Tanya Holonko, Bucklew endorsed MontPIRG under the waivable fee system.

Jeff Heffernan, also on the committee, said Bucklew did not like the mandatory system. "He told us he could not, in his mind, go into the regents' meeting supporting a mandatory refundable system," he said. "He said he felt it (mandatory system) was poor public policy."

Holonko said that MontPIRG has always seen the waivable system as an acceptable option to the mandatory system. "He (Bucklew) knew we were not uncomfortable with the waivable system," she said.

She added that MontPIRG preferred the mandatory refundable system but that the waivable system was also a strong funding base. Bucklew was attending a Big Sky Conference convention in Ogden, Utah, last night and could not be reached for comment.

The mandatory refundable system would have required students to pay a $2 fee during registration. This fee could have been refunded after the first three weeks of the quarter to students who did not want to pay it.

The waivable system is similar to the mandatory in that students may get a refund after the third week of the quarter. The difference is that students will have the opportunity to waive the fee during registration by checking a box on their registration forms.

Holonko said that MontPIRG favored the mandatory fee system because it would have created fewer administrative problems. She said that MontPIRG will pay UM administration to collect the money. Under the mandatory system, she said, all the administration would have to do is add up the number of registered students and multiply that number by two to get amount for the funds.

Under the waivable system, she said, the administration would have to go through each registration form and find out how many people waived the fee.

Law school seminar to review tax laws

By Deb Thiele
Kaimin Reporter

About 250 to 300 lawyers, accountants and tax consultants are expected to attend the University of Montana this Friday and Saturday for the School of Law's 29th annual Institute on Taxation and Estate Planning seminar.

The seminar, conducted every year by the law school, is to inform individuals in the tax related fields about changes and recent developments in federal and Montana tax laws.

There will be several speakers for the two day event and their topics will include: 1981 changes in estate and gift taxation, analysis of tax shelters, the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 and retirement plan changes.

Coordinator of the seminar is Lester Rusoff, UM professor of law. Rusoff joined the UM law school faculty in 1957 and has been the coordinator of the tax seminar since then. Courses Rusoff teaches are federal tax, tax planning for agriculture and taxation of corporations. He also taught estate planning for several years.

Advance registration for the seminar may be accomplished through the law school or at the University Center Five Valleys Ballroom from 8:30 a.m. to 9:20 a.m. Friday.

The fee for the seminar is $75. This will cover tuition, outlines, and refreshments during the seminar.

For more information call the law school at 243-4311.

• Budget Director David Stockman wants to phase out two urban aid programs and eliminate subsidies for low-income housing construction as part of spending cuts that have left federal housing officials in shock, sources said yesterday. The two programs, which this year aided about 2,850 communities in every part of the country, started out with a $4.2 billion budget for 1982. The unidentified sources said Stockman is seeking a 75 percent reduction in the nearly $18 billion subsidized housing program for 1982 and even deeper cuts for 1983.

opposed those of their governments. Rock said that in order to avoid being faced with explaining the arrests of non-violent political dissidents, governments secretly kidnap and dispose of them, and thus people "disappear," never to be heard from or seen again. He said the governments later deny any knowledge of the victims. For example, he said, at least 10,000 El Salvadorians "disappeared" in 1980.

Amnesty International, which won the Nobel Peace prize in 1977, recently completed an investigation of the FBI concerning the cases of a black militant and an American Indian presently serving sentences in U.S. prisons for murder. The prisoners claim much of the evidence used against them was fabricated by the FBI, and Amnesty International is calling for an inquiry into possible abuses by the FBI, especially in these two cases.

Amnesty International is "independent of all governments, political factions, ideologies, economic interests and religious creeds." In order to insure impartiality, Amnesty International and its affiliated groups work only on cases of political prisoners held in countries other than their own. For example, Amnesty International groups in the United States handle only cases outside the country.

A sign-up sheet was posted at the lecture room to aid in the organization of an on-campus Amnesty International network at the University of Montana. Rock said the weekly television newsmagazine 60 Minutes will feature a segment on Amnesty International this month.

proposed park area. Ray Prill, head of the local chapter of Trout Unlimited, was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Wilcox said the city is also attempting to get a grant from the state to help buy the land. He said the city is applying for part of $150,000 of unused grant money from last year. Wilcox said the grant was the city's "best bet" for outside financial help to buy the land.

Cregg said even if no outside help is obtained, he favored buying the land with money remaining in the city's conservation fund. "It's a hell of a deal," Cregg said. More than half of the $500,000 conservation fund was recently used to purchase a 10-acre parcel of riverfront land in the downtown area for the proposed park system.

A private landowner in the Hellgate Canyon area, whom Wilcox declined to name, has offered to buy 10 acres of the land for $1,500 an acre, more than double the price — about $709 per acre — of the Milwaukee Road offer. Cregg said the landowner wanted to use the land for access to property in the area.

Because the city approached Milwaukee Road first about buying the land, Cregg said, it was offered to the city at the lower price.

Wilcox said the city has until Dec. 10 to notify Milwaukee Road whether it will sign the buying option.

The UM Foundation has expressed interest in buying two other parcels of land — just north of the university and east of the Madison Street Bridge — totaling about nine acres. Wilcox said the city is assured access through these parcels for the proposed park system. Also, city officials have discussed the possibility of the UM Foundation finding someone to donate the land to the city or donating the land itself. No foundation official could be contacted to comment on the issue.
